Mr. Jones: Nanako, Kenji, what are you doing?

Nanako: Hi, Mr. Jones. We're making a plan for the school field trip to Asahi Park on September 24. We're very excited because you can join the field trip!

Mr. Jones : I can't wait! there?

Kenji: We'll cook and eat *outdoors.

Mr. Jones: Cooking? Is it a camp?

Nanako : No, it's just a one-day field trip. We call it suiji ensoku. We often cook jingisukan, curry and rice, and miso soup with meat and *vegetables.

Mr. Jones: I see. We don't have field trips like that in America. We usually take a bus to go to places like museums and parks. We don't cook and eat outdoors on a one-day field trip.

Nanako: Suiji ensoku is often done in Hokkaido. I hear it's a part of Hokkaido culture.

Mr. Jones: Hokkaido culture? It's interesting. But how do you *make a fire outdoors?

Kenji: There are many big *stones in Asahi Park. We can make a *circle with them. We'll put *charcoal in the center and make a fire. Then we'll put *pans on the stones and cook with them.

Mr. Jones: Sounds good! Will we do something after cooking and eating?

Nanako: Yes, now we're thinking about that. Kenji said he wants to play volleyball, but I don't think we can do it because there's no *court and no *net there.

Kenji: Nanako, we can do it. I'll bring a *cord and *tie it to two trees as a net. Then, I'll draw lines on the ground and make a court between the trees. We can make a volleyball court in nature!

Mr. Jones: Good idea. If we can't find good trees for it, let's *hold the cord together, Kenji.

Kenji: Sure.

Nanako: That's great! Tomorrow we'll show this plan to our classmates.
